

Reflection

Name: Franck Sokora

Total Points 100

Why is this week's topic important for teamwork?

This week we learned about the power and importance of communication. I think this topic is important in teamwork because communication is the key in understanding others and be understood. Misunderstanding and disagreement can be a stumbling block as to achieve team goals and meet deadlines. So, knowing to communicate with others and be fair in our dealing is essential as we prepare to enter the workforce.

How do plan on contributing to the team, besides completing your tasks?

I plan to use the ten communication strategies and the 15 simple ways to improve team communication learned in the reading material into our team. Some examples of them are, be open to feedback, be clear about tasks so everyone knows their responsibility, do fun stuff to boost morale, understand diversity issues, be open and honest with my team members and take ownership for mistakes.

How does your experience relate to other experiences you have had?

During this week we reviewed our Acorn project and made some changes, the idea I presented was finally not too achievable we are planning to review this part and plan for a better goal. I was not frustrated and reacted positively and understood the overall objective. So, we are going to meet during next week and work on it together.

How does your experience relate to other classmates' experiences?

My experience is like my team members because we are all committed to use these communications skills and be productive and more united together.

If this was a religion class, how would you relate this week's topic to the gospel?

I will relate it to communication, the Lord invited us to be true and just in our dealing with others. He also said that we need to let our yea be yea and our no be no; by this emphasizing on the fact to be trustable person, people that our team could rely on, people true to their words and commitments.